Don’t Miss Your Last Chance to See Artwork By Local Artist Judy Kane at Plumas Bank

A new artist will be featured starting in February as part of the ongoing partnership with the Museum of Northern California Art

Chico, Calif. (January 13, 2026) - Chico residents have less than a month left to see local artist Judy Kane’s work on display at Plumas Bank on Mangrove Avenue. Her art has been on display since October and will continue to be featured through the end of January, after which a new artist will be introduced in February as part of Plumas Bank’s ongoing partnership with the Museum of Northern California Art (monca).

“We invite the community to visit our Chico branch and experience Judy’s work before her art on display comes to an end this month,” said Ian Macmillan, branch manager at Plumas Bank’s Chico location. “Having her art inside our branch has brought a sense of creativity and conversation into our space, and it’s been a pleasure to share it with our team and visitors. We are proud to showcase her creative vision here in Chico and look forward to welcoming the next artist soon.”

Kane is an accomplished abstract artist and anthropologist who has been part of the Chico arts community for almost 50 years, showing her work at venues across Northern California, such as Blue Line Gallery in Roseville, Chico Arts Center, and monca. In addition to painting, she works in mixed media, collage, sculpture, and functional art in her home studio. Her work explores culture, humanity, and our connection to the Earth, with paintings that range from light and playful to richly layered compositions full of color, rhythm, and depth. Each piece reflects her lifelong curiosity and deep ties to both art and community.

The art on display is a part of Plumas Bank’s extended gallery space at its Chico branch, which has featured numerous Northern California artists through its partnership with monca, including Rick Vertolli and Tim Moore. The collaboration shows the bank’s ongoing support for local artists and celebrates Chico’s vibrant arts community.

Kane's work can be viewed at Plumas Bank, located 900 Mangrove Avenue, Monday to Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. The bank also permanently displays landscape prints on metal by Paradise artist Jeremy Vesely and an outdoor mural by Chico artist Dylan Tellesen.

To see more of Kane's work, community members can follow her on Instagram at @judykane.art.
